New festival a kingdom of Australia's best beers

Beer lovers can be the first to celebrate some of the nation's best brews, with tickets on sale today for the Royal Queensland Food and Wine Show's (RQFWS) new beer festival Kingdom of Beers.

The event in March will give the public the chance to taste more than 100 beers from 20 of the nation's best breweries, including some of the medal-winners from the RQFWS Beer Awards.

Attendees will also be the first in Australia to taste a range of unique beers brewed using desalinated water, with 13 of the breweries collaborating with Seqwater as part of the RQFWS Beer Awards to ensure the sustainability of beer production.

The event will also feature food stalls including RQFWS award-winning beef and lamb, plus plenty of entertainment and games such as inflatable jousting and axe throwing.

Kingdom of Beers was introduced to give entrants in the RQFWS Beer Awards a chance to showcase their brews and medal-winning achievements to consumers in the same week the results are revealed (Wednesday 4 March).

The event will take place at the Brisbane Showgrounds on Saturday 7 March, with a daylight session from 1-4.30pm and a dusk session from 5-8.30pm.

Early bird tickets are now on sale at www.kingdomofbeers.com.au for just $10 each. Hurry, this offer ends Monday 3 February.
